

Classical Waterfall Model The classical waterfall model is a sequential software development process where progress flows in one direction: requirements → design → implementation → testing → deployment → maintenance. Key Characteristics:

- Linear, phase-based approach
- Documentation-heavy
- No feedback loops between phases
- Best suited for well-understood, stable requirements

Common Uses:

- Military systems
- Manufacturing
- Large enterprise systems with fixed requirements